About the Guest of Honour project

Norway is the Guest of Honour at the Book Fair in Warsaw 26 – 29 May 2022. The book fair is an exciting opportunity to present a wide range of Norwegian literature in the Polish market. 30 authors from Norway will engage with their Polish audience and strengthen the connection between our two countries. “The Dream We Carry” / “Marzenie jest w nas” is our slogan.

Poland has become an important market for Norwegian literature and there is a large interest ranging from crime and Nordic noir to children’s books and cartoons. Polish literature is also well received in Norway. Being the Guest of Honour is a testament to this common interest in our cultures and languages.

“I am thrilled that Norway will be the Guest of Honour at this year’s Book Fair in Warsaw. Great literature can move us, provoke us and make us see all that we have in common, something we need more than ever as we try to leave the pandemic behind. Norway’s presence at the fair will make Norwegian literature even more accessible to a Polish audience, for the benefit of both authors and readers” says Anniken Huitfeldt, Norwegian Minister of Foreign Affairs.

“We are very excited to be the Guest of Honor of the Book Fair in Warsaw. This is a big opportunity to once again present authors and books from Norway to an international market, this time to Polish readers. During the last five years, Polish has been among the top 10 languages of NORLA’s translation grants. Many authors from Norway are already available in Polish translation, so the literary program will show all aspects of contemporary Norwegian literature”, says Margit Walsø, director of NORLA.

“There are countless reasons why we should read. Books expand horizons and introduce us to new places, cultures and traditions. Books fill gaps and build bridges. I hope that the participation of Norway as the guest of honour at this year’s Book Fair in Warsaw will give Poles an opportunity to deepen their knowledge about contemporary Norwegian authors and their literature, and also a tool to understand even better our particular culture, values and approach to life”, says Anders H. Eide, Ambassador of Norway to Poland.

Norwegian presence and visual identity

Architect Anetta Blassej recte Błazej has designed the Norwegian tent and the common stand in Hall Marmurowa in the Palace of Culture and Science. The design is in a light colour palette with emphasis on openness, conversations and the literature.

Hall Marmurowa is the main working place for the Norwegian literary agents participating at the book fair. The literary agencies participating are: Cappelen Damm Agency, Egmont Kids Media, Gyldendal Agency, Magikon, Northern Stories Literary Agency, Oslo Literary Agency and Stilton Literary Agency. In Hall Marmurowa, you will also find a stage with a program for book trade professionals, a book exhibition of Norwegian books translated to Polish, a creative corner with children's books as well as a staffed info desk. See attached program for Marmurowa for all details.

The Norwegian tent (Namiot E) is situated directly in front of the Palace of Culture and Science. The design of the tent mirrors Hall Marmurowa. The Norwegian tent is the main stage for the Norwegian program with daily program, a book shop run by Moda na Czytanie and a designated area for book signing after the literary events.

The visual identity is made by NODE Berlin Oslo and is a redesign of the visual identity from the Frankfurt project in 2019. The Guest of Honor project will be visible on printed materials and all over the city: on the fairgrounds at the Palace of Culture and Science, on public transportation in Warsaw and on the metro station Świętokrzyska.

About the Guest of Honour Program

We are pleased that 30 authors from Norway are coming to Warsaw and will feature in 50 literary events during four days at the Palace of Culture and Science. You will find several series in our literary program: The daily program in the Norwegian tent will be kicked off with brave children and young adults' literature. You will meet some of the best authors and illustrators from Norway. In "The Green Hour", you will meet authors writing about nature, environment and travelling. In the series "Domestic Dilemmas", you get an insight in Norwegian society and current issues, through fiction, and in "The Mysteries of Man" and "The Crime Hour" you will also get a glimpse inside the mind.

The program offer insight into the future and also the past: "The Classics' Hour" and "WW2 in Norway" give you an introduction to two of Norway's Nobel Prize Laureates and in World War II in Norway. Looking to our present day, we offer the series "Poetry Hour" including Ukrainian poetry, "European Feminists Anno 2022" and "European Literature Today".

In Hall Marmurowa, you can visit our trade program, directed to book professionals. You can learn about translation, literary policies in Norway and Poland and two bilateral library projects. There are also meeting places between Norwegian agents and foreign book trade professionals.

Are you interested in languages? Visit our pop-up language course! Children are welcome to our creative workshops on Friday and Saturday.

Selected highlights will also be shown on the book fair's own Main stage. See attached program for all details.

All events are either in Polish or available in Polish translation.

The authors participating are:

Malin Falch, Kristin Roskifte, Bjørn F. Rørvik & Per Dybvig, Bjørn Sortland and Monika Steinholm (Children and Young adults)

Lene Ask, Anders Kvammen and Anja Dahle Øverbye (Graphic Novels)

Marta Breen, Erika Fatland, Torbjørn Færøvik, Nina F. Grünfeld, Asbjørn Jaklin, Kaja Nordengen and Anne Sverdrup-Thygeson (Non-fiction)

Kjersti Anfinnsen, Marie Aubert, Cecilie Enger, Helga Flatland, Vigdis Hjorth, Jørn Lier Horst & Thomas Enger, Klara Hveberg, Victoria Kielland and Nina Lykke (Fiction)

Aina Villanger (Poetry)

We are honored to also have Sami yoiker Biret Ristin Sara and author/yoiker Karen Anne Buljo on the program. DJs Charlotte Bendiks and Niilas will give you the beat of Norway.

Lene Ask, Anders Kvammen, Malin Falch and Anja Dahle Øverbye also participate in the comics festival Komiksowa Warszawa, which is held at the Palace of Culture and Science during the book fair.

In the Norwegian Tent, in front of the Palace of Culture and Science, you can buy Norwegian books in Polish translation from the independent booksellers Moda na Czytanie. They offer books from the authors on the program and other highlights from other authors from Norway.

The Guest of Honour project is organized by NORLA in close cooperation with the Royal Norwegian Embassy in Warsaw.

Polish Perspectives on the program

Anthology

KARTA Publishing house has made a new print-run of the anthology “Droga na Północ. Antologia norweskiej literatury faktu”, supported by NORLA. The anthology is a collection of non-fiction literature, presenting the Norwegian experience in the 20th century. Zabierają tu głos nobliści, politycy, społecznicy oraz zwykli ludzie – którzy znaleźli się w czasie i miejscu najważniejszym dla Norwegii i umieli o tym opowiedzieć. Jest to nie tylko zapis norweskiej historii, ale także opowieść o kulturze, tradycji i codzienności Norwegów.

Książka powstała, by pokazać polskim czytelnikom prawdziwy, barwny obraz Norwegii, jej historii i ludzi przez bezpośrednie zapisy – dzienniki, wspomnienia, listy. Teksty źródłowe opatrzone komentarzami i uzupełniono ponad 100 zdjęciami z całego XX wieku.

The anthology will be presented on Friday 27 May in Hall Marmurowa, 16:00-16:45 hrs.

Universities and students

At present, there are as many as nine universities in Poland where Norwegian language is taught. Poland is thus the country with the most Norwegian students in the world, probably only outnumbered by Germany. As of today, between 300 and 500 people are studying Norwegian at Polish universities at bachelor's and master's level. At the Mickiewicz University in Poznan and at the University of Gdansk, it is also possible to take a doctorate in Norwegian language and literature. The university with the most Norwegian students is the University of Gdansk, with 95 students. The university with the longest tradition of offering education in Norwegian language is the Mickiewicz University in Poznan. In Poznan, there has since the mid-60s been a Norwegian lecturer and the possibility to study Norwegian.

Around 100 of the students will travel from other cities to attend the Warsaw Book Fair, to learn more about Norwegian literature and society. The Norwegian Embassy in Poland has invited all students and lecturers of Norwegian to a joint breakfast on Friday 27 May.

On Saturday 28 May, at 13.00, the teaching of Norwegian language in Poland will be presented at the book fair. Here, a selection of the universities will present specific projects they are working on with the students. The session is led by Maria Sibinska, head of the Katedra Skandynawistyki in Gdansk.

Translators

Translators are one of the most important groups in NORLA's everyday work and in this Guest of Honour project. Polish translators to Norwegian open the door to new readers with their important work. Their translations are the foundation of the programming. In the Guest of Honour project, some of the translators have also taken on moderation and interpretation of different literary events and participation in panel discussions.

Bilateral program

All our programming is rooted in interest from Polish publishers and which authors from Norway are translated into Polish. In addition to that, we have some programs with an even stronger bilateral connection, where Norwegian and Polish counterparts meet on stage:

26 May

14:00-15:45 in the Norwegian Pavilion (Tent E, PKiN): Poetry Hour. Alicja Rosé presents Norwegian poet Aina Villanger and other Norwegian and Ukrainian poets in Polish translation

About the poem It is that dream by Olav H. Hauge

Norway's slogan as Guest of Honour at the Warsaw Bookfair is 'Marzenie jest w nas' – 'The Dream We Carry'. The words derive from the poem 'It Is That Dream' by the much loved Norwegian poet Olav H. Hauge (1908–94). In 2016, the poem was voted by readers and viewers of the Norwegian Broadcasting Corporation (NRK) as the greatest Norwegian poem of all time. The life and work of the great poet is presented in the Olav H. Hauge Centre for Poetry in his homevillage by the Hardangerfjord.

In 1982 a book by Olav H. Hauge was published with the sober title Dikt i umsetjing (Poetry in Translation), and it was here that it became clear that this Norwegian poet — who had himself published seven volumes of poetry between 1946 to 1980 — was one of the most active translators of poetry into Norwegian.

It might seem strange that Hauge, who was a trained gardener and lived as a fruit farmer, would bring complicated poetry into a Norwegian linguistic form. One reason for this can be found in his Dagbok 1924–1994 (Journals 1924–94), which were published after his death. These almost 4,000 pages tell a strong and fascinating life story, dealing with both the external and internal. The external drama concerns Hauge's psychotic outburst in his early twenties, when he lived in a psychiatric hospital for several years. He came home to the farm but was hospitalized many times throughout his life. The internal story tells of how he used literature to understand and interpret these experiences.

In the first part of his authorship, he experienced the gap between the dream and the earthly as painful and referred to himself as a dreaming gardener. But eventually, the dream became interwoven with literature. The dream and the poem became the place where everyday experiences — and the experience of being 'detached' and on the other side — could meet. "It Is That Dream" is one such meeting place. (Excerpt: Jan Inge Sørbø).

Jest marzenie w nas

Jest marzenie w nas,
że stanie się coś niezwykłego,
że coś musi się stać,
otworzy się czas,
otworzy się serce,
otworzą się drzwi,
otworzą się góry,
wytryśnie źródło,
że któregoś ranka wpłyniemy spokojnie
do portu, o którym nic nie wiedzieliśmy.

Translated into Polish by Alicja Rosé

Det er den draumen

Det er den draumen me ber på
at noko vedunderleg skal skje, at det må skje —
at tidi skal opna seg,
at hjarta skal opna seg,
at dører skal opna seg,
at berget skal opna seg,
at kjeldor skal springa —
at draumen skal opna seg,
at me ei morgonstund skal glida inn på ein våg me ikkje har visst um.

It Is That Dream

It is the dream we carry that something wonderful will happen, that it must happen –
that time will open,
that our hearts may open,
that doors shall open,
and the mountain shall open that springs will gush forth –
that our dream will open,
and that one morning we'll glide
into a cove we didn't know.
